THE TELEPHONE.

It is to be hoped that the telephone company will discover the unwisdom of increasing the rentals as announced in the recent circular. The action was not well-considered. The service has been of value, so much so that many people have seriously considered the propriety of taking the instruments out and going back to the more reliable if less expeditious messenger boy. That telephones have not been ordered out by the dozen is due to the fact that people are patient and long suffering and to the belief that the company would make improvements and better the service. To increase the cost without improving the service naturally does not have a softening effect on the public mind; the ordinary person regards it as adding insult to injury, and doing it in a highly offensive manner; to his mind it has something the flavor of being robbed by a highwayman and then choked because you haven't more valuables to give up. Besides, there has always been a feeling in the community that the extortion was pretty severe which took $30 a year for the use of an instrument which cost $3.40.

The fact is, this increased charge finds the people in no mood to welcome or even submit to it. This is proven by the boycott which is threatened, patrons of the company giving notice that the telephones must be removed if the intention is to enforce the recent order. To what extent this movement will go, cannot be told, but it won't go very far to deprive the company of more money than it will be able to collect in increased rates from those who retain the 'phones. If the public shall once become thoroughly aroused and conclude to make the fight, the telephone company might as well shut up shop and retire from business, for the boycott will not only extend to the ordering out of numerous telephones, but to those who retain the instruments and do not join with the people in the fight against the monopoly; and this community knows well how to boycott.

In one month the company can be made to lose more money than it would derive from the increased rates in a year.

We therefore say it is to be hoped the telephone people will see the unwisdom of their recent notice, and will recall it before it is too late. A failure to do this will certainly result in a long and expensive fight—expensive for the telephone company and not for the people, for it will cost the latter nothing. They may be inconvenienced some, but they can endure a good deal of that sort of thing when they save money by it. This city got along without the telephone and people did not suffer to any great extent by reason of the absence; we wouldn't cease to be happy and prosperous if the knowledge of the wonderful invention were to be lost to the world.

ROBERT INGERHOLL having said he will smoke as long as he lives, a Rhode Island paper adds: "And longer, too, perhaps."

THE NEW YORK SUN says there are ten thousand thieves among the permanent residents of New York city, and three or four thousand "leeches." The estimate does not include bank cashiers and ward politicians.

THE CHICAGO HERALD says that city is siltier than any other large town in the world. The wide circulation of this information will undoubtedly help along the world's fair.

HOOP-IA.

That was a startling piece of news given exclusively in THE HERALD on Tuesday morning. Of course we refer to the summary removal of Assistant United States Attorney McKAY. It has set the town talking, and those who didn't talk thought and wondered. Here was a federal official bounced from his place without notice, bounced for alleged cause, and the bouncing done ten days ago without the gentleman or anybody else at the end of the line getting a hint of what was going on. To say the least, they do things queerly in these days. Do not for a moment think that we are pleading for the gentleman named. Not the suggestion of a stick will go up from this office because of his removal. He ought to have been removed; he should never have been appointed. It was cause for astonishment when he was put into the place, and just why he was given the office only those who gave it were ever able to fully understand. And yet, a feeling must arise in the minds of those who have in their composition a sense of fairness, that McKAY has not been treated exactly right in this matter. A regard for the proprieties should have suggested that he be granted at least an opportunity to be heard in his own behalf, especially so, as the allegations against him have been on file in the department of justice three years and he has never been asked to explain any of the charges. We are glad he has gone, and believe the removal would have followed if he had made a full showing; and still it isn't a decent way to treat a man to kick him before letting him know that he is liable to be kicked.

In connection with this removal arises another question—Judge McKAY was designated and appointed on the recommendation of his superior, United States Attorney VARIAN. The latter was thoroughly familiar with his assistant's record, the two having been close companions for years. Mr. VARIAN must also have known more or less of Special Agent FISHER's report upon which Judge McKAY has been removed, and been acquainted with the charges in that report. The attorney-general thought there was enough in the report to justify the summary removal of the assistant, though Mr. VARIAN did not think there was enough either in McKAY's record or FISHER's showing to prevent him from asking for McKAY's appointment as his assistant. The question which naturally suggests itself now is this—Ought Mr. VARIAN to be retained, the removal of his assistant being justifiable? Persons of average reasoning powers will say that the attorney-general cannot consistently hold on to the man who induced him to appoint one now regarded as unworthy. Will the attorney-general take the same view of the matter? Is the problem that will naturally keep the United States attorney on the anxious seat for some time to come.

And then again, why has Mr. FISHER's report been hid away all these years? We were led to believe when the special agent had completed his investigations that he had collected a good deal of matter that would be very damaging to certain parties when it should appear in an official report, but so far as the public know the matter was dropped when the agent left Utah, and there has since been wonderment as to what became of him and the startling exposures he was expected to make. His document has only now been dug up, and apparently for use against one individual and he the most insignificant of the crowd said to have been included in the investigation. There is something very mysterious and decidedly peculiar about all this business. Official ways are sometimes past finding out.

THE HERALD may be in error in its guess, but until the contrary has been demonstrated we are going to think that when the facts come out it will be found that Judge McKAY's removal can be traced directly to the fight that is being made against Marshal PARSONS, to prevent his continuation by the Senate. It is so open that it is no secret at all that what is popularly known as the federal ring is earnestly and industriously engaged in an effort to "down" Mr. PARSONS. Things have been made very unpleasant for him here, and at Washington he has been assailed in such a way as to prevent action on his nomination by the Senate. The assistant United States attorney, it is understood, has been among the most active in the pursuit of the marshal. It has been said that even a barrel hoop will turn if trod upon, and it is not improbable that Mr. PARSONS thinks he is as good as a barrel hoop. At any rate, we are assuming that he is taking an active hand in the knifing business, and that the first scalp dangles from his belt. The expectation is that his caput will soon drop into the basket, and that others will precede and follow it, the contest now being a battle for blood.

MEANTIME, THE HERALD, with the great majority of the people, occupies the delightful position of the old lady who watched the life and death struggle of her husband and bruin, and urged the combatants on with the encouraging words, "Go it old man, go it bear." It isn't our fight, and to confess the truth, we don't care a snap of the fingers as to the outcome.

PRICE HENMARCK will not have to skimpish about for a job for some time. He is worth $10,000,000, and with economy will be able to get along.

IT WILL NOW BE IN ORDER to denounce the owners and managers of the Leadville smelters as base-born knaves, traitors to their country and bent on the destruction of the mining interest. They have dared to ask that the privilege of keeping their smelters open be granted them. The request seems a modest one, but there are statesmen and editors who will protest against granting it.

THE OWNERS of additions and subdivisions would greatly help matters if they would invest some money in cottages for rent.

NELLIE BLY gained so much notoriety by her flying trip around the world that she struck the New York World manager for increase of salary, and was promptly struck back with an emphatic refusal. NELLIE is bright, but she doesn't seem to be bright enough to understand that she owes all her notoriety to the generosity and sensational proclivities of the World. If it hadn't been for that paper the young lady would be a rather uninteresting girl with red hair and a snub nose.
